The Covid-19 pandemic presents huge challenges to all of us and we know that lockdown has had a dramatic impact on your life, work and business as it has for schools and all families.

But music is as important as ever to the lives of children and young people.

You all know that music can:

- increase confidence and self-esteem
- improve health and wellbeing
- provide important life and social skills
- develop creativity and self-expression
- improve cognition, literacy and numeracy
- be the key to unlocking potential

Nobody is expecting an immediate return to business as usual – we need to prepare for a different normal. And at this particularly difficult time you need to make it easy for schools and customers to choose you.

This guidance sheet sets out some of the key things that you can do to deliver music differently at the moment and ensure that it doesn't disappear from children and young people's lives.

#DontDropMusic

If we all do it, we can create momentum!

What you can do:

Communicate with schools, colleagues and parents/carers

Make sure you're in touch with your schools' music lead(s).

Find out if the school has new policies and practices that you need to be aware of.

Provide info to your schools about your offer for them to send out to families including new pupils joining the school.

Consider how / where you could adapt your models / approaches (including online resources) to cope with a different 'normal' and how that will help meet what the school can manage and pupils need.

Make sure that your profile on our online Directory is up to date particularly in terms of the new Online Tuition status and Clusters. Login here

Liaise with other tutors working in the same schools and explore ways you might collaborate to make choices simpler for schools and pupils e.g. shared PDF's of profiles / offers.

If you want to know which other Associates are teaching in the same schools as you, please ask us

Signpost pupils to our financial support

Our tuition subsidy allocation will be increased for academic year 20–21 but within realistic parameters as we need to consider how we manage expectation for tuition support with limited funds in subsequent years.

Get involved in our campaign

Help to protect a highly skilled workforce. Even if you're not looking for more work or new pupils please get involved with our campaign!

Use social media and share / retweet / favourite / like any posts with the campaign hashtag #DontDropMusic

If we all do it then it creates momentum!

Share our new film promoting availability of Associates for schools & pupils to colleagues, families and pupils. Watch the film here

Pupil safety

If you are teaching online, or planning to, make sure you use and refer to the guidance / framework for online Safeguarding developed by us and approved by Wiltshire Council. Detailed here
